

Thomas Magnusson

Dr. Alan Labouseur

Operating Systems

05 November 2018

Lab 7

1. I have no idea if whoever your talking about has gone through the necessary qualifications to become a doctor. Is this a medical doctor? Or is this a PhD? Perhaps if he's graduated medical school, or successfully completed a PhD program then yes, he is a candidate to be a great doctor. Beyond that, I suppose a great doctor would go above and beyond what normal doctors do. The greatest? Probably not. But how are you measuring greatness? Is this by some sort of telos or function that all doctors are supposed to perform? I suppose the greatest doctor would be the perfect doctor, or as close to the perfect doctor as could be. Then what does a perfect doctor look like? In an academic sense, perhaps the one with the most research, the one who has helped the most students or people, the one with the most academically earth-shattering ideas. I doubt most any doctor has performed well in even a couple of those dimensions. But maybe. I guess the answer is maybe. I'm not sure.